PORTION INTERVENTION.

There is no good foundation for the idea that logiand will intervene in favor of the Southern racy, for the sake of getting cotton Unless the statesmen of that country have given up a policy persevered in for more than twen ty years, they would witness with satisfaction the entire abandonment of the cotton cultivation in America. It is not at all likely that they will be diverted from permanent views of national aggrandizement, by the temporary sufferings of the cotton manufe They will not forego the great idea of drawing cotton from their own India, by the diff oulties which necessarily attend so con ble a revolution in the course of trade. It is not the characteristic of British statesmanship to be weak and vacillating. Cotton from Indihas been its aim for long years, and now that it i upon the point of being realized, it is prepos-terous to supp as that Great Britain will go to war for the asks of reviving American compe-tition in the production of cotton. Nothing

And even if Great Britain desired to go back to her old dependence upon America for the supply of an indispensable raw material, by what process of reasoning can she convinc bereelf that that object is to be effected by taking up arms for the Southern Confederacy The eventualities of war are proverbially un certain, and the probabilities are at least equa that foreign intervention in our civil war would give a turn and character to it, which would end the production of cotton for an indefinite

If this cotton question is thus easily disnose of all other commercial questions, as likely to influence Great Britain to hostilities with m are equally so. There is not a single interes of British commerce which does not persuad to peace. Great Britain needs our breadstuff for her manufactures, which, however restrict ed by high tariffs and our diminished ability to urchase, are still worth preserving. The motive which Great Britain has, to desire the disruption of the American Union not commercial but military and political. It is founded upon a jealousy of our power, no unnatural in view of our unprecedented growth. United, we were the undisputed mas ters of one hemisphere, and, as they believed threatened the balance of power throughou

We ought not to have been surprised at th manifestations which we have seen, of the pleas ure with which British statesmen have watched the appearances of our downfall. Nor ough we to be greatly offended at these things. If it was ill will and malignity, it might provok our resentments, but it is not so, or only to a chiefly by the instinct of self-preservation They may not reason correctly about it, but they certainly did and do believe that united America had already become too great for the equilibrium of the world. It is that mainly, which inclines them to desire the disruption of the American Union, and which tends to induce them to aid actively in making that dis ruption permanent. There never was but one influence which could be set in motion, to counteract this British tendency, and that was, the anti-slavery senti ment of the British people, which is deep genuine, and pervading. Some persons may choose to regard that sentiment as a fanaticism but it is none the less real and powerful or that account. If we arouse it, it will be to strong for mere statesmanship, or policy, and will effectually prevent British intervention against us.

Until recently, there was nothing in our man ner of carrying on the war against the South ern Confederacy calculated to attract anti sla very sympathies in Eigland, or indeed any where else. It has been the manifest purpose of our Executive Administration to put down the rebeliton without injuring slavery, impos tiqued to prove. But the policy of the Presi deat has now been overruled and reversed by Europe, the most beneficial consequences may be anticipated. Cougress has decreed immediste and unconditional freedom to all the claver of the rebels who can escape into our lines. This is equal, in effect, to a decree of freedom for all the slaves of rebels, because no declara tion of Congress would be practically efficient beyond the lines of our military power. It is making war apon the principle of abolishing slavery as we advance, and a war upon that principle, when the popular masses in England are made to understand it, will arouse all their sympathies. We conless that we count largely upon this influence to counteract the disposi tion to intervene against us which undoubted! ex ats in the British Cabinet.

As to immediate intervention against us by Great Britain, it need not be apprehended. It is doubtless British opinion to day, that the dis ruption of the American Union is an already accomplished fact. Why should they take the risks of war and the burdens of war to effect as object which they believe to be already secured? If they intervene at all, it will be when they believe that without their intervention, the Southern Confederacy will be wiped out and the old Union restored. The time of danger so far as British intervention is concerned, is not when the rebels seem to be successful, but when they shall appear to be on the point of being crushed. Until then, Great Britain has many inducements to remain a passive spectator of the struggle. She has no love for either of the parties, and may be very willing to see

The probability is, that the anti-slavery legis lation of Congress will prevent interventic attogether, but, at any rate, there is no reaso to fear it at present, or until there shall be material change of circumstances.

St. Louis.-There was a great meeting at St Louis, of the loyal men, on Menday evening The sentiment was universal in favor of liber ating the slaves of all rebels, and some of the speakers urged that they should be armed as soldiers. Every expression of that kind was applauded to the echo. Slavery was treated as sole cause of the war and all expectation of ending the war, except by crushing slavery was repudiated. This is no new opinion for the loyal men of Missouri; but they express it now with that perfect confidence in its correctne which results from the bitter experience of the long trial and utter failure of the contrary policy. THE ACTION OF THE WAR COMMITTEE .- It WA resolved by the War Committee, organized yes terday, to attempt to raise two more regim in this District, to accomplish which, they will probably offer a bounty of $75 or $100. To do this, they have appointed a finance committee who will solicit contributions from every busi ness man and family in this District, and wil continue their solicitations until at least two hundred thousand dollars are raised. They have further resolved to publish the names and amount of each contributor, and also the name of those who do not contribute, so that the pub lic will be able to judge of the loyalty of our citizens.

The New Merrimac Expected to Come Out.

FORTRESS MONROR. July 31.—The steamer Georgia, from Washington, with over 200 re-leased rebel prisoners, arrived here this morn-ing at 70 clock. The boat still remains here, having received orders to remain here until to-morrow.

The mail steamers between this place and Harrison's Landing go up every trip loaded with soldiers belonging to various regiments returning to duty. Some of them have beev very sick. New recruits also are passing up this way.

The health officers have made a thorough inspection to-day of all dwellings, stores and places of business at Old Point, giving the occupants notice that they must be in readiness to-morrow for another inspection that will justify the officers in making a favorable report. This is a good movement, and it is hoped that a thorough compliance with sanitary regulations will be observed, so as to insure the health of the place.

Commodore Porter's Mortar Fleet, which has done such good service on the Lower Mississipol, arrived here last evening.

The rebels last evening attempted to capture another schooner which was anchored above Harrison's Landing, but they were folied in their attempt. They came over in two boats from the opposite shore, and being discovered were fired upon, when they beat a hasty restreat, after firing some half dozen shots at the schooner.

Near Little Washington, July 30.

Nothing can exceed the beauty of the scenery in this region. The village of Washington is situated at the head of the Blue Ridge, and is environed with lofty spurs of the same mountains, covered with dense timber. The valley extends north and south several miles, and the divide of the valley has been selected as the camping ground. Excellent water is abundant, running on both sides, fresh from the mountain springs.

running or both sides, fresh from the mountain springs.

In the election for delegates to the Richmond convention, which thrust the State from prosperity into the jaws of the rebellion, and made its flourishing plantations scenes of bloodshed and desolation, this county (Rappahannock) gave over four hundred majority, in a vote of ress than nine hundred, for a Union candidate. It seems fair to suppose, and intercourse with prominent men induces the belief, that the oath of allegiance will be generally taken by an equal number without reluctance, provided they feel assured of our power and intention to protect them against accession tyranny. In almost every instance, our troops have been kindly treated by the inhabitants, and the sick who found their way to farm houses have been well provided for and nursed.

Last Wednesday, about fifty guerillas intercepted and captured a regimental train and two sutlers' wagons belonging to the corps between Fourt Boral and Wicchester. capted and captured a regimental train and two sutlers' wagons belonging to the corps between Front Royal and Winchester. The train was escorted by twenty cavalrymen, who made their escape. The next day a force was sent to the spot, when the wagons and nearly all of the contents were recovered, but the horses had been secured by the enemy.

Since Middletown was evacuated by our forces, it has been a kind of rendezvous for small roving bands of guerillas, but no large force has been acon in that neighborhood. The mountain gorges and ravines between Thornton's Gap, west of here, to Chester Gap, near Front Royal, are known to harbor large num bers of this class. They however are never seen, except in scattering parties of twes, free, etc.

The orders of General Pope relative to oaths of allegiance and with, holding guard over private property, are well received. Officers, if there be any, who cannot restrain the depredatory spirits in their commands are unworthy of the positions they occupy. Justice to loyal citizens and to the Government requires that no property shall be wantouly destroyed.
